It is reliably stated that the road to the cemetery is in such deplorable condition with chug holes, that had we had more rain or snow, it would have been impossible to bury our dead.

Fred Jones Is Home.
Fred Jones, son of Mr. S. H. Jones returned Thursday from New York, after having been honorably discharged from the U. S. navy in which branch of the service he worked for eighteen months as his contribution toward making the world safe for democracy.

He made two trips to France on the U. S. S. Chicago which was engaged in transport work. His ship had the distinction of conveying the largest number of vessels across the Atlantic. These consisted of 35 submarine chasers and ten tug boats. The microphone listeners disclosed the fact that there were submarines under the briny sea and in their vicinity, but the Hun commanders apparently did not relish the idea of trying conclusions with the sub chasers and taking a chance with their depth bombs and guns. As a consequence, Fred had to pass up the excitement of a real scrap.

The trips were made via Bermuda and the Azores to Brest France, and, on the last outward voyage, while off the Azores, they heard that the armistice had been signed. The ship stayed there for ten days and then towed back two subs.

Fred was discharged on Monday and the ship sailed for a three months cruise to South America on Wednesday. Thus, he failed to get a still greater knowledge of practical geography by just two days. However, he did get a trip to Cuba and the Dry Tortugas.

He expects, as soon as he has got the sea roll out of his legs, to resume his duties as Deputy Clerk.

He says Barbourville looks good to him.
